The Irish Pawnbroker.

A real funny performance is what Murphy and Murphy, the old favorites, promise us next Saturday evening, when they will present their popular farce called "The Irish Pawnbroker," written by Edgar Selden, who has fashioned several successful farce comedies. This piece has more of a plot than is generally found in the Murphy and Murphy farces, but the plot is not allowed to interfere in any way with the exultant ment. As Tony Murphy says: "Anyone finding a plot absolutely and telling us what it means will be given a barrel of apples." Much attention has been paid this year to the musical numbers and specialties, some of which will be found very entertaining.

DOWN EMBANKMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Have Narrow Escape from Death in Wild Auto.

Nashua, N. H., Sept. 18.—An automobile occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Forest V.
Martin ran over a 20-foot embankment at Pennichuck brook bridge yesterday, and that both escaped serious injury is regarded as almost a miracle. The machine was running rapidly down a steep hill beyond the bridge when it slowed in a bed of sand, crashed through the guard rail and over the bank landing squarely on all four wheels. The occupants were thrown out, then the automobile turned a complete somersault pinning Mr. Martin underneath. Both occupants were badly bruised.

In Remembrance of McKinley

H. A. MACNEIL.

THE recurrence of the 14th of September recalls the name and fame of William McKinley and revives interest in the various projects in honor of his character and services. Since Sept.
14, 1901, when President McKinley breathed his last at Buffalo, numerous memorials to him have been projected. The principal of these are the national memorial at Canton, the McKinley monument in Niagara square, Buffalo, and the memorial at Columbus, state capital of Ohio. Statues of McKinley have been erected in several other places since his death, including one at Muskegon, Mich., by Charles H. Niehaus and another at Adams, Mass., by Augustus Lukeman. The statue at Muskegon was the gift of the philanthropist, Charles H. Hackley, and was unveiled in May, 1902. That by Mr.
Lukeman at Adams was the gift of public school children, members of churches and factory employees. It is of bronze, eight feet high and represents the late president in a characteristic speaking pose with hand upraised.
On each of the four sides of the granite pedestal are tablets with appropriate scenes in relief.

The memorial at Buffalo, which is now about finished, consists of a tall marble shaft, at the base of which are four monumental lions in repose, the work of the famous animal sculptor, A. Phimister Proctor. The cost of this memorial was met by the money left over from the appropriation made by the state of New York for a building and exhibit at the Pan-American exposition. The mausoleum at Canton is the most elaborate and expensive of McKINLEY STATUE AT COLUMBUS.

the various memorials mentioned. It will cost at least half a million dollars and is the gift of thousands of admirers of the lamented statesman in all parts of the land. The mausoleum will stand on an elevation just outside Westlawn cemetery, and in front of it will be a heroic statue of McKinley by Niehaus. The model of this statue was recently accepted by the trustees of the McKinley Memorial association.

The McKinley memorial at Columbus was planned as a tribute to the memory of the third martyr president from the state of Ohio and the city of Columbus. Its site is the park in front of the statehouse, the structure where Mr. McKinley when governor labored for the welfare of the commonwealth.
Its cost was $50,000, and the expense was met by an appropriation of $25,- 000 by the legislature from the treasury of the state and by the raising of an equal amount by Columbus citizens.

The memorial consists of a statue of McKinley flanked by two allegorical groups. The task of unveiling the statue on the fifth anniversary of the late president's death was most appropriately accorded to President Roosevelt's daughter Alice, now Mrs.
Nicholas Longworth. The statue itself is of bronze, of heroic size, and weighs 3,000 pounds. It portrays McKinley delivering his last memorable Pan-American exposition address, and two quotations from the speech are carved on the pedestal. The allegorical groups which flank the statue are of exceptional beauty. One group shows a man of great strength and beside him a youth, the two figures typifying prosperity and progress. The other group consists of two female figures, one representing American womanhood. The woman, with her left arm encircling a maiden, places the palm of peace above the sword and helmet.
The group as a whole typifies the joys of domesticity and peace.

The statue and groups are the work of Herman A. MacNeil, and the models for them were made in his picturesque studio on Long Island sound, at College Point, N. Y. The memorial as a whole is considered one of the most successful works of this noted young sculptor.

DR. SHELDON JACKSON.

The Reindeer Experiment in Alaska and Its Connection With It.

The Rev. Dr. Sheldon S. Jackson of Alaska, against whom charges were filed by Frank C. Churchill, a special agent of the interior department, is a noted Presbyterian missionary. He has issued a statement vigorously denying that any fault could justly be found with his conduct in connection with the matters dealt with in the agent's report; the use of reindeer in the work of the missionary school service in Alaska. Some years ago the government inaugurated the plan of bringing reindeer from Lapland and employing Eskimo in using them for transportation purposes in Alaska.
Dr. Jackson assisted in this work and journeyed across the Siberian wastes

REV. DR. SHELDON S. JACKSON.

and brought back with him the nucleus of a reindeer herd.

There were once large droves of reindeer in Alaska, but they were long ago practically exterminated.
Walrus, whale and seal were depended upon by the natives for food supplies, clothing and fuel, but they are growing scarce owing to the activity of their hunters. It became a question whether the government should feed the natives outright and thus pauperize them or introduce a new industry and teach them to become self supporting. With the latter idea the reindeer plan was tried, the system being to lease the animals to the natives, their returning to the government at the end of a specific time a number equal to those leased, retaining the increase.

Dr. Jackson in his reply to Special Agent Churchill says: "It was charged that, while the government has spent about $250,000 for reindeer and the Alaskan herd numbers 10,234, there are only 2,500 in the possession of the government. The inference is that I or some one else must have unlawfully disposed of nearly 8,000 of the 10,000 reindeer in Alaska. The fact is that 3,817 had been earned by the native Eskimos who had served a five years' apprenticeship in the care and management of reindeer; 2,127 had been earned by the mission stations—mainly under contract with the government—who, in return for the loan of 100 deer had clothed, fed and cared for native apprentices during their five years' apprenticeship and then had returned to the government the original number of deer loaned them, retaining the fawns for future work in training Eskimo apprentices; 1,187 had been earned by the Laplender teachers, who also had received small loans from the government, which, after five years they returned to the government, retaining the fawns born for themselves."

BRITISH BRIEFS.

The population of Bombay is within less than 20,000 of the million mark.

The southern (England) police of all ranks have been forbidden to wear finger rings while on duty.

Within the last forty years the population of the British empire has increased by about 40 per cent.

A sixpence of the reign of Charles I. was found in the stomach of a bullock killed recently by a Yarmouth (England) butcher.

Biplanejackets from the ships of the Australian squadrons are permitted to travel free on the New Zealand railways, as the government considers that their talk of the country when they return home will attract immigrants.

Nearly 500 men fell out from the ranks of the British army every year owing to weak hearts and other defects brought about by the illogical system of physical training in the army, said Sir Frederick Treves recently. This system is now under review.

"Left Handed" Lions.

It was the belief of Livingstone that nearly all lions were "left handed." He watched them closely, and when they desired to strike a fierce blow they always used the left paw.

Biliousness

"I have used your valuable Cascarets and find them perfect. Could I do without them, I have used them for some time for indigestion and biliousness and am now completely cured. I recommend them to everyone. Open trial, you will never be without them in the family."
